MONTHLY NEWSLETTER

VOL II, ISSUE II (MARCH 21ST 2016)

IN THIS ISSUE

Welcome to the second issue of the Specker Library Newsletter for this year! In this issue, we discuss the new display built in the library to highlight some of the new education books added to our collection. Additionally, we highlight the development of a section in the library specifically for faculty and administrators.

Students, faculty and staff can access Specker Library's electronic databases on campus, as well as from home through the library's website. Simply visit our website, click on "Databases," and select an option. If you are at home, you will be prompted to enter your student ID # and last name to access our resources.

Students coming to the library this week will notice a new display located close to the library entrance. This display was created to showcase some of the over one hundred new education books that the library has added to the collection in the last few weeks. Students, especially those in the education program, will find many useful books on display, including those on the history of education, effective teaching strategies, and research methodology.

The library recently launched a new display section designed to showcase new and useful books for faculty and administrators. Located near the library's circulation desk, this new display includes recently added education books in the areas of curriculum and course development, leadership, teaching and research methodology, and more. Stop by the library to check out some of these books, and be on the lookout for our weekly emails containing information about the latest education books we have added!
